The only reason Christians think their faith has more epistemic warrant is because they are more familiar with it. 8) That there was a person who was 100% God and 100% man with nothing left over who walked the earth even though the Bible itself tells us ancient people believed demigods walked the earth.

Debunking Christianity: My Top Ten List of Christian Delusions

Collectively, these articles reveal that popular Christian beliefs tend to rely on ignorance of the facts. Drawing together experts in diverse fields, including Hector Avalos, Richard Carrier, David Eller, and Robert Price, The Christian Delusion deals a powerful blow against Christian faith. Comment

Secular Web Kiosk: The Christian Delusion: Why Faith Fails

Faith is a vitriol to knowledge and understanding. It is claiming something we don't and can't know, it is insidious and unreliable. It is a delusion, an epistemological conjuring trick, an investiture of truth which can be, and often is, applied to any puerile absurdity imaginable.

Why Faith is Delusional

In The Christian Delusion John Loftus brings together a series of articles by contemporary free thinkers all focused around a common epistemological critique. It is the sequel to Loftus's Why I Became an Atheist: A Former Preacher Rejects Christianity. The book is divided into five parts, each addressing a different aspect of Christianity.
